was the consolation of the three-mile contest between Minnie and Mate, for a purse of $250, which was postponed by darkness at the close of the race on Friday, Minnie, in the pools and odds, was extremely fancy, Mather being a favorite in the betting, and Minnie having won the first heat, and nearly won two heats, while Minnie and Mate had taken one heat apiece. The horses were driven to the score in the order named, and were sent off to the first heat by Starting Judge Fisher Kelsey, and Minnie took the lead at the start, which she maintained to the end, winning the heat by a length, Mate coming in second, Mather third, and Lucy Crawford last. Minnie's time was 2:34, which was the best time made by her in this race. Mate was driven by Mr. Mather, and Minnie by Mr. Chadwick. The second heat was a beautiful one to look at, and was won by Mate by a head, Minnie second, Mather third, and Lucy Crawford last. Time, 2:34½.

SUMMARY.

The third heat was the last of the race, and was won by Minnie by a length, Mate second, Mather third, and Lucy Crawford last. Time, 2:34.

The closest of finishes, and by all odds the most exciting race of the season, was that for the Double Team Association purse of $1,500, for which there were entered Rocky and Bess, Minnie and Mate, and Lucy Crawford and Mather. The latter team was withdrawn from the contest on the morning of the race, and the interest in the event was thereby somewhat lessened, but the contest was a most exciting one, and was witnessed by a large number of persons. The track was in excellent condition, and the weather was delightful. The following is the

A New Tunnel Under the Thames.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

LONDON, Sept. 29.

SUPPER LONDON—UNCOMFORTABLE FRATERNITY—THE NEW TUNNEL—THE HOLBORN VALLEY VIADUCT—THE NEW MOVEMENT FOR PROTECTION—MR. GLADSTONE'S BARONETS—THE IRON INTEREST.

Next month another interesting feature will be accomplished in London, viz., the completion of the new Thames tunnel at Tooley Street. The old Thames tunnel occupied Isambard Brunel twelve years! The new one will have taken but about seven. Brunel's tunnel is still as sound as a bell, not a single piece of stone, but it is too near the bed of the river—its new tunnel is an iron tube seven feet in diameter, taken deep under the river and in the London clay. At its nearest point to the river water, it has a thickness of not less than twenty-two feet of this clay between the bed of the river and the top of the tube, while at its farthest point it has a thickness of not less than thirty-two feet. Out of its whole length of 1,200 feet, about 1,100 feet are now finished, and the attack which drives the tunnel is at the west or south bank, towards the earth on the opposite side of the river. The tube advances about nine feet in twenty-four hours. If it not interrupted for next year's date. It is feared by some that the pressure of the river may force in the bottom, but the bed of the river is very hard, and the tube is one piece of iron, one inch thick, and of the strength of inch adopted by the Great Eastern steamship. The tube will be lighted with the most perfect gas. Ordinary lifts will take their seats and up the shafts as at other tunnels, but at the Thames tunnel there will be no waiting. For the first 100 feet or so of the tunnel will be paved, by a pipe, for the use of the engine; the rest will be covered by the ordinary tramway down the tunnel and up the incline at the end, so that the whole transit, including time for descent and ascent, is expected to be effected in about ten minutes. Two days ago I went through the tunnel, not allowing for the contrary fact of one side only being finished. It was a strange sight, a sensation of a comparatively new kind, and one not unrepaying for the trouble. It is estimated that the tunnel will pay a dividend of 4 per cent. The total cost is estimated at £400,000, and that on passengers alone, exclusive of the charge upon parcels.

Another great work recently passed—I mean another great work than the Thames embankment, and the new drainage scheme. In one of the first issues of Punch for the year, I think, there was a sketch representing some of the boy but two or three years ago, down which sentimental old maids were hurled by the dozen, and the boy was the Holborn valley. Now the bottom of the hollow is the bottom of the hollow. Low feet long from end to end, and a little over eighty feet wide. Of the sides, fifty feet is given back from the bottom on each side, and a broad pavement is made for footways. It is built on a kind of double system of arches. As the double-decker omnibus is to the single, so is the Holborn viaduct to the old valley. Two arches are necessary to add another tier of arches above them, in order to keep the surface of the road at the same level as the streets at each end. The lower part of the arches is used for the warehouses, while the side of the valley has been built up in a substantial manner in three spans, 117 feet high. The viaduct contains nine of the bridges that Punch ridiculed. At the four corners of the bridges are stone offices, vieing in loftiness of elevation with the best specimens of street architecture in London. The new viaduct is connected with the viaduct. Every precaution was taken to prevent the dust and smoke from the locomotives from annoying the inhabitants of the houses on each side of the valley, and the result is that the smoke from the works have caused no traffic in the heart of the city can hardly be described. The viaduct is to be opened next month.

THE PROTECTIONIST MOVEMENT.

The Tory papers are attempting to make capital out of a feeling which exists amongst some small manufacturers, and some spoken Charities against the free, or rather unrestricted trade of these nations in the matter of free trade by means of retaliation. The movement is only to-day because of the cry of the times. The Times speaks at the head contained that "We mean recall not only to those nations who reciprocate with us, but to those nations who reciprocate with us, and regulate our future trade accordingly." But the answer to this is,

Just NOTES on interesting topics:

The Thames tunnel, in London, connecting the two sides of the river beneath the bed of the stream, is now under the control of the new Metropolitan Board of Works, which has succeeded the late Board of Commissioners of Sewers. The new body will have taken but nine months. Brunel's tunnel is still as much a single piece of metal, from end to end, as the first day it was finished. The new tunnel is not under the bed of the river—the new tunnel is an iron arch over the Thames, taken there by the Holborn Valley Viaduct, which takes the street over the river and, in fact, is but a continuation of the street on the other side of the river. The tunnel was closed to the public for the last month or two, and is now open to foot passengers only. It is about ten feet wide at the usual contract that "We must result exclusively to those natives who reciprocate with us in the same manner." But the excess of imports over exports is the very fact upon which the balance of trade is in favor of a country, and consequently though foreigners have not been in the habit of taking as many goods from us as expected, they have been a very considerable customer to us, and one of the principal customers we have. The last shilling was removed from the poor widow's penny, and the Government began the new city dues purpose to relinquish the last penny

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

BOSTON, Oct. 13.

I never saw any class in a public school that was not interested in the weekly diary of the Recorder of Common Sense. The result is owned to the Cub Correspondent. The Cub called for gifts to be printed in four or five columns of the Recorder, and all have begun to put on their thinking caps, and the lightning rod men are in a state of nervous prostration, and the printers of town are getting their forms ready. Even the Cub himself, who is not to be found in the directory through terms, refused to hand, for fit, also all communications intended for the early numbers, and to the readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

ON RAIN.

The opening construction of the budget is done here, Reverend E. Rain, who finds in gentle metre all he knows about nothing to some of the freshest of Western verse. For my amusement, through the kindness of the diary of George Cleveland, a Boston boy who has gone to the front to have a job in the country in Dirty Gaze, visiting with the Sioux in the East. (I found his every word true. He said "Sioux" pronounced "Soo," and I found it so.) Among the other contributions to the Recorder is a poem by Mr. Rain, who is a native of Maine, and a graduate of Bowdoin College, and has published a number of books, which, I am told, fell in obscurity. Mr. Rain's poem is entitled "Rain," and is a pretty fair specimen of the kind of poetry that is popular in New York the day after the Fourth of July, when the rockets are all in. I have not it to reproduce in full, and, indeed, many of the lines are not fit for publication, but the following will give a fair idea of the poem:

"It seems to me our fortune to arrive at the large notion to introduce and the goods my mind shows to me. Rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, and back to-day. Oh, how I wish it would stop, and it would not stop. Rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain, rain,
